About the Editor

F. Thomas Juster is Director of the Institute for Social Research and Professor of Economics at The University of Michigan. His research interests include economic and social accounting systems, the measurement of economic welfare and the distribution of welfare, the role of expectational measures in analysis of the spending and saving behavior of consumers, and the analysis of non-market time and time allocation generally among households.

He has published extensively in all of these areas, including "A Framework for the Measurement of Economic and Social Performance," (in The Measurement of Economic and Social Performance) Milton Moss, ed., Columbia, 1974; Education, Income and Human Behavior, McGraw-Hill, 1975; Anticipations and Purchases, Princeton University Press for NBER, 1964; and Household Capital Formation and Financing, Columbia University Press for NBER, 1966.

Juster is a member of the American Statistical Association Advisory Committee to the U.S. Census Bureau, a Senior Advisor to the Brookings Panel on Economic Activity, a member of the Advisory Committee to the Congressional Budget Office, and Chairman of a recent National Academy of Sciences Committee on the measurement of energy consumption.
