Author's Acknowledgments

The author is much indebted to those who read the manuscript of this study during its preparation. Especial gratitude is owed to Professor Richard R. Powell, C. Reinold Noyes, and Professor Arthur H. Cole for their careful review and criticism of the legal and historical aspects of the first several chapters. Professor R. J. Saulnier, the Director of the Financial Research Program, has been a continuous source of aid and encouragement. My thanks are due also to Miss Katherine Krenning for her thorough checking of references and other details of the manuscript.

In a pioneering work on such a controversial subject as that of government intervention, the author must, however, relieve all those who have helped him from any responsibility for his interpretation of the economic and political processes he has examined.
