APPENDIX E

Classification of Stocks of Finished Goods
According to Character and Source of Raw Materials

To judge the relative importance of the various categories of finished goods stocks distinguished in Chapters 11 and 12, census values of stocks in each minor industry as of December 31, 1939 were classified according to the source of their raw materials—agricultural or nonagricultural—and according to their character—perishable or durable and staple. In many cases all the inven-ories of an industry group could, for the purpose of this rough estimate, be assigned to one of the four classes (Table 106). When a division seemed necessary, it was based upon our judgment of the relative importance of goods of different types in the output of each minor industry, allowance being made for the fact that, relative to sales, smaller quantities of perishable than durable goods are kept in stock.

Totals are the sums, to the nearest million, of the individual items originally expressed in units. For this reason, some totals differ slightly from the sum of the items given here in millions.
