To whom it may concern:

My name is Jan Overgoor, and I'm hoping to attend the NBER Economics of Digitization tutorial. I'm a first-year doctoral student in the computational social science group at the Management Science and Engineering Department at Stanford University.

Before coming back to school I worked at Airbnb on the search algorithm and experimentation platform. I intend to continuing working on these topics during my graduate studies.

I have not yet taken many Economics classes, but I started with the microeconomics and econometrics sequences this quarter. My first research project this summer was on developing statistical tests to measure disparate impact and discrimination in police traffic stop data. We collected data from all 50 states using freedom of information requests and are preparing to release it for public use.

As I'm local at Stanford, I won't need support for accommodation.

Best,

Jan Overgoor
