

Call for Papers, NBER China Conference
Cambridge, MA, October 12, 2007

TO: Potential Authors
FROM: Shang-Jin Wei
DATE: March 1, 2007

The next National Bureau of Economic Research workshop on the Chinese economy will be held in Cambridge, Massachusetts, on Friday, October 12, 2007.

The conference provides a forum to discuss new China-related research, broadly defined, and to exchange views between China specialists and NBER members who have an interest in the country but may not otherwise be specialists. The conference does not publish proceedings or issue NBER working papers - most of the presented papers are presumed to be published later in journals.

Participants in the past meetings included U.S.-based economists working on China and NBER members from various programs, such as International Trade and Investment, International Finance and Macroeconomics, Public Economics and Asset Pricing.

If you are interested in presenting a paper this year, please email a PDF version to me at swei@nber.org by June 2, 2007. Preference will be given to empirically oriented papers for which a draft is ready by the time of submission. Only authors of accepted papers will be contacted. The travel and hotel costs will be covered by the NBER.