

Jerome A. Chazen Institute Postdoctoral Research Scholar on Asia

Columbia Business School's Jerome A. Chazen Institute for Global Business invites applications for a postdoctoral research scholar for a period of one year beginning July 1, 2019. The appointment is for outstanding new PhDs who have a demonstrated ability to generate high-quality business and economic research focused on Asia. This appointment offers a competitive salary, support for travel and research expenses, and may be renewed for up to three years pending performance. There are no teaching responsibilities or office guarantees.

The postdoctoral research scholar will actively participate in the intellectual development and program activities related to the Chazen Institute, including authoring contributions to the Institute's e-newsletter, Chazen Global Insights, as well as engaging with the media on relevant topics. The incumbent will also participate in Columbia Business School's scholarly and applied seminars and workshops, and other collaborative research-related activities.

The Institute is seeking applicants with demonstrated excellence in research, writing, and presentations in relation to Asia.

REQUIREMENTS

Applicants must have completed a Ph.D. prior to the beginning of the fellowship, and should have a research record.
