Acknowledgments

This series of meetings was initially proposed by Martin Feldstein, President of the National Bureau of Economic Research. He suggested that an annual health policy research conference held in Washington, D.C., would offer a unique opportunity to bring together academic economists and policymakers. He offered encouragement, support, and the resources needed to organize the meeting, and helped ensure its success.

I am grateful to the authors, each of whom worked hard to put together a paper and presentation that would be of special interest to a broad policy audience. I also thank the NBER administrative staff for their help in organizing the conference and publications; they include Sean Murphy, Richard Woodbury, Deborah Mankiw, Claire Gilchrist, Deborah Kiernan, Elizabeth Cary, and Kirsten Foss Davis. Finally, I am grateful to the National Institute on Aging, which has supported a large portion of the NBER's health care research agenda, and to the Commonwealth Fund, which supported the research reported in two of the chapters in this volume and helped defray the costs of this conference.
