Preface

The present volume is the result of the National Bureau of Economic Research Conference on Import Competition and Adjustment: Theory and Policy, which was held in Cambridge, Massachusetts, 8–11 May 1980.

Supported financially by the Ford Foundation, the conference was aimed at developing theoretical concepts and ideas concerning the topic of import competition, defined broadly to include different types of economic responses to the fact of import competition. Thus, international economic theorists of distinction were invited to model processes such as lobbying relative to import competition, for instance. The volume therefore addresses a number of theoretical issues that are fairly novel and which also bear on policy questions, in many cases fairly directly.

For making the conference highly successful and a pleasant experience, Kirsten Foss of the NBER and Maureen Ryan of MIT deserve special thanks. Maureen Kay of the NBER provided cheerful and prompt help through the year that preceded the conference. Won Chun of Columbia helped ably with the finalization of the volume for the University of Chicago Press. Anne Spillane assisted cheerfully with the publication of the volume. Peter Ruof of the Ford Foundation was, as always, extremely generous with his ideas and deserves special thanks.

Finally, Robert Feenstra worked through all the papers and spotted numerous errors in spelling, algebra, and economics. His conscientious and acute reading of the papers has improved the quality of the volume immeasurably.
