
Subject Index

- Agglomeration economies: in central business districts, 97, 105, 108, 127–28; factors reducing, 157–58
- Altruism, intergenerational, 203–4
- ARM. See Mortgage, adjustable-rate (ARM)
- Baby boom effects, 40–42
- Basic Land Law (1989), Japan, 27
- Bequest motive, Japan: effect of, 172–76; for saving, 163, 165
- Bequest tax, Japan, 216, 229–30, 231, 236.
See also Inheritance tax, Japan
- Building Lease Law, Japan, 12, 25–27, 167, 216, 232, 235
- Capital gains, Japan: recommended tax, 216; tax related to land, 226–29
- Capital gains, United States, 193–94
- Capital market, United States, 75–77
- Case-Shiller property sales indices, 32, 35–36
- Central business district (CBD), Japan: agglomeration economies in, 97–102; land price function, 114–25; land prices and population density, 102–8; Mills-Muth urban spatial model interpretation, 87–89; policy proposals for Tokyo, 125–28; Tokyo/New York comparison, 89, 91–97; underutilization of Tokyo's, 111–13
- Central business district (CBD), United States: composition of, 133–34; factors influencing move from, 145–48; factors limiting growth of, 157–58; housing consumption in, 135–39; wasteful commuting, 154–57
- Commuting, Japan: cost of, 87–89, 108–11; costs, 88–89; subsidies for, 87–89, 126–27
- Commuting, United States: by automobile, 145–48; costs of, 134, 136–41; large metropolitan areas, 141–45; metropolitan areas, 141–42; regression model of urban, 152–54; shift from public transportation, 148–52; urban trip characteristics, 150–52
- Commuting, United States and Japan, 7–8
- Company housing, Japan, 217, 230–31
- Consumption, Japan, 178. See also Bequest motive, Japan
- Consumption, United States: factors influencing land, 135; ownership and rental, 240–42; with rise in housing prices, 202–5. See also Housing consumption, United States
- Credit policy, Japan: based on government home financing policy, 58–60; with change in monetary policy, 18–19; effect of limited, 49; for housing loans, 50–55
- Credit policy, United States: for borrowing, 239; effect on housing markets, 249; mortgage assistance, 249–50
- Data sources: for Tokyo land price and population density, 118–21; for U.S. house prices, 30, 31–34, 38–39

- Demographics, United States, 40–43
- Deposit Institutions Act (1982), United States, 71
- Deregulation and Monetary Control Act (1980), United States, 68
- Economic Recovery Tax Act (1981), United States, 247
- Employment distribution, Japan: compared to New York City, 89; with low commuter costs, 89–90
- Employment distribution, Tokyo–New York, 91–102, 111–13
- Employment distribution, United States, 145–48, 157
- Farmers Home Administration, United States, 249–50
- Federal Home Loan Bank (FHLB), United States, 70
- Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation (Freddie Mac), United States, 69–70, 251
- Federal Housing Administration (FHA), United States: loans from, 251; mortgage subsidies, 249–50
- Federal National Mortgage Association (Fannie Mae), United States, 66, 69–70, 239, 251
- Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery, and Enforcement Act (FIRREA), 1989, United States, 74
- Financial markets, United States and Japan, 6–7
- FRM. See Mortgage, fixed-rate (FRM)
- Government role, Japan: price monitoring, 233–34; in setting benchmark land prices, 225–26; in setting housing standards, 224–25, 232
- Government role, United States: credit policy, 239, 249–50; in-kind assistance, 239
- Home ownership: after-tax user cost, 242–46; comparison of U.S. and Japanese rates, 4
- Home ownership, Japan: motives for, 172–76; preferences for, 166–72; wealth accumulation with, 185–88
- Home ownership, United States: rates, 80–81; rates of return to, 31
- House prices, Japan: high level of, 11, 49; land cost as share of, 12–16; levels of, 49. See also Land prices, Japan
- House prices, United States: downward stickiness, 43–45; factors in changes of, 39–45; measures of real, 79–80; pattern of, 30–31; regional differences, 32, 35–39, 46; volatility in, 37–38. See also Case-Shiller property sales indices; Weighted repeat sales (WRS) method
- House prices, United States and Japan, 5–6
- Housing, Japan: problems of, 218–20; relation to wealth accumulation, 185–88; saving motives related to, 161–71
- Housing, United States: demand by elderly, 200–202; factors in demand for, 135–36; in metropolitan areas, 141; relation between consumption and investment, 206–10; subsidies for owner-occupied, 242–46; subsidies for rental, 246–49; trends in urban and suburban, 134–45
- Housing and Urban Development Corporation (HUDC), Japan, 58
- Housing Construction Program Law, Japan, 58
- Housing consumption, United States: by elderly, 200–202; risks in decisions for, 206–7; stimulation to, 202
- Housing market, Japan: government decisionmaking in, 58–60; methods used by buyers, 57; proposals for, 60–62; public- and private-sector lending, 49, 52–57; sources of, 49–57; strategies for, 57. See also Credit policy, Japan; Mortgage market, Japan; Subsidies, Japan
- Housing market, United States: effect of changing regulation, 65–66; efficiency of, 43; price stickiness in, 43–45; public policy, 239–40. See also Credit policy, United States; Mortgage market, United States; Subsidies, United States
- Housing markets: public policy for, 8–9; United States and Japan, 6–8
- Housing prices, Japan, 217–18. See also House prices, Japan
- Housing prices, United States: appreciation and saving, 202–6; effect of changes in, 207–9, 210; index of (1950–89), 193–97. See also House prices, United States
- Housing production, Japan, 104
- Housing production, United States, 81–84
- Housing quality, developed nation, 2–4

- Housing quality, Japan, 11, 167, 217–20; factors limiting, 216–17; public policy, 224–25, 234–35
- Housing quality, United States, 143–45
- Housing wealth, United States: index of (1950–89), 193–97; influence on consumption, 202–5
- Income, United States: impact on trends in cities, 135–36; levels in relation to house prices, 30–33
- Inheritance tax, Japan, 24–25, 226, 229–30.
See also Bequest motive, Japan
- Interest rates, Japan: with change in monetary policy, 26–27; for housing loans, 54–55; with tight money policy, 26–27
- Interest rates, United States: after-tax real, 79–80; effect on housing demand, 81–84
- Investment, residential: pre- and post-1981 U.S., 68–69; with U.S. interest rate variation, 81–84
- Japan Housing Loan Corporation (JHLC): loan mechanism, 56–57; planning function and lending policy, 58–60; role of, 6, 49, 50–52
- Journey to work. See Commuting, Japan; Commuting, United States
- Land acquisition tax, Japan, 226
- Land Agency, Japan, 225
- Landholding tax, Japan, 27, 226
- Land Lease Law, Japan, 12, 19, 25–26, 167, 232; proposed liberalization, 27
- Land leasing, Japan, 27–28
- Land price index, Japan, 225
- Land prices, Japan: analysis of inflation in, 19–23; causes of increased, 16–22, 54; differences in, 225–26; impact of population and employment distribution on, 89; increase, 5, 217, 220–23; levels of, 11, 13–14; rate of increase, 15–16; structural factors related to, 23–26; with and without paid commuting costs, 114–25
- Land prices, United States, 39–40; factors influencing suburban, 135–41; related to distance from CBD, 134–35; relation to commuting cost, 134–36; in suburbs and central business district, 147–48
- Land prices, United States and Japan, 5–6
- Land scarcity, Japan, 23–24
- Land use, Japan, 23–24, 26; in central business district, 106–7, 111–13; under Land Lease Law, 25–26
- Land use, United States, 140–41, 157
- Life-cycle model of consumption: factors influencing saving, 192; housing and saving decisions, 197–200; implications for elderly, 200–202; saving and spending simulation model, 202–3, 210–11; saving motives throughout, 165
- Maekawa report, 218
- Migration model, 46
- Mills-Muth urban spatial model, 87–89, 128, 134–36, 137, 142–43
- Monetary policy, Japan, 18–19, 26–27, 54
- Mortgage, adjustable-rate (ARM), United States: deregulation and expansion of, 70–73; with housing-finance regulation, 65–66; savings and loan funding of, 74–75; securitization of conventional, 70n3
- Mortgage, fixed-rate (FRM), United States: coupon rates with securitization, 75–78; with housing finance regulation, 65–66; securitization of conventional, 69–70; S&L funding of, 74
- Mortgage debt, United States, 194–95
- Mortgage market, Japan: housing loans in, 176, 178–85; role of Japan Housing Loan Corporation in, 49, 50–51; securitization recommended, 60–62; structure and function, 50, 52
- Mortgage market, United States: guarantees, 249; loan-to-value ratio, 241–42; pass-through securities, 69, 251; regulation of, 65–66; securitization or secondary market, 239, 250–51; subsidies, 249–52. See also Mortgage, fixed-rate (FRM), United States; Mortgage, adjustable-rate (ARM), United States; Savings and loans (S&Ls)
- Mutual savings banks (MSBs): home mortgage share, 74–75; investment in home mortgages (1960s–70s), 66–69
- National Housing Act (1934), United States, 249
- Political structure, U.S. metropolitan areas, 134, 141–42
- Population density, Japan: with low commuter

- Population density, Japan (cont.)
 costs, 89; of Tokyo central business district, 113–14
- Price monitoring system, Japan, 215
- Private sector, Japan: conditions for housing loans from, 55–56; for housing finance, 49, 50–52, 55
- Property tax, Japan, 226; impact on land prices, 24–25, 27; on landholding, 27.
See also Landholding tax, Japan
- Public housing, Japan, 223–24
- Public housing programs, United States, 252–55
- Public lands, Japan, 233–34
- Public policy. See Credit policy, Japan; Credit policy, United States; Housing market, Japan; Housing market, United States; Monetary policy, Japan; Mortgage market, Japan; Mortgage market, United States; Rental market, Japan; Rental market, United States
- Public-servant housing, Japan, 217, 230–31
- Public services, United States, 134, 139–40
- Real estate assessment, Japan, 225–27, 229, 231
- Registration tax, Japan, 226
- Rental market, Japan: costs of office rental, 14, 17; under Land Lease Law, 12, 25–26; preferences for housing in, 166–72; protection of tenants in, 217, 232; subsidies in, 217. See also Tenants/renters, Japan
- Rental market, United States: investment incentives, 246–49; subsidies to, 239; tax subsidies for housing in, 246–49; user housing costs, 246–48
- Residential density, Tokyo–New York, 91–102, 111, 113
- Retirement History Survey*, 202
- Saving, in United States and Japan, 8
- Saving motive, Japan: for future consumption, 178; for housing, 161–71; major purposes, 176–85
- Saving rate, United States, 204
- Savings and loans (S&Ls): government subsidies to, 251–52; home mortgage share, 73–75; investment in home mortgages (1960s–70s), 66–69
- Securities and Exchange Law, Japan, 28
- Securitization: of conventional adjustable-rate mortgages, 70n3; impact on fixed-rate mortgage coupon rates, 75–78; recommended for Japanese mortgage market, 60–62; of U.S. fixed-rate mortgages, 69–70; in U.S. mortgage market, 239, 250–51
- S&Ls. See Savings and loans (S&Ls)
- Speculative bubbles, Japan, 16–22
- Subsidies, Japan: in company and public-servant housing, 217, 230–31; for employee commuter costs, 87–89, 126–27
- Subsidies, United States: for home ownership and rental housing, 239; for housing investments, 242–49; low-income housing, 252; for low-interest loans, 236; for mortgages, 249–50; owner-occupied, 242–46; for public housing, 252–55; to rental property, 246–49; to savings and loans, 251–52
- Suburbanization, United States: of employment, 145–48; factors influencing, 134–41; of housing, 141–45, 148; measurement of metropolitan area, 139–41; predictions for, 157–58
- Sunshine law, Japan, 232–33
- Tax credit, Japan, 231–32
- Tax depreciation, United States, 247
- Tax Reform Act (1986), United States, 69, 195; effect on tax rate and home ownership costs, 244–46; rental housing depreciation benefits, 247; tax shelter restrictions, 247–48
- Tax shelter investment, United States, 247–48
- Tax system, Japan: on agricultural land, 230; influence on land prices, 24–25; land- and housing-related, 225–32; proposed urban land tax, 126; to protect underprivileged, 217; related to landholding, 27.
See also Subsidies, Japan
- Tax system, United States, 239. See also Subsidies, United States; Tax Reform Act (1986), United States
- Tenants/renters, Japan: protection under Land Lease Law, 12, 25–26, 232; wealth accumulation, 185–88
- Tenants/renters, United States, 246
- Transportation: Japan's public, 88–91, 97–101, 108, 110–11, 126–28; U.S. public and private, 134–40, 145–57

- Urban growth model, 134, 136–39, 143–44
- Urban trends, United States, 134–41, 158. See also Mills-Muth urban spatial model
- Veterans Administration (VA), United States:
loans from, 251; mortgage subsidies,
249–50
- Wealth, Japan, 185–88
- Wealth, United States, 191, 206–9. See also
Housing wealth, United States
- Weighted repeat sales (WRS) method, 32,
35–36