Chapter pages in book: (p. 241 - 243)

Index

- Age, and consumption-income ratios, 90-97
Average propensity to consume (see Consumption-income ratios)
- Becker, Gary S., 85n, 238n
Boulding, Kenneth E., 7n
Brady, Dorothy S., 4, 37, 42n, 62nn, 63n, 79n, 93f., 122, 123n, 157, 162, 163n, 165f., 205n, 232
Brumberg, Richard, 6n, 29n Budget data on consumption-income ratios:
and age, 90-97
and changes in income, 100-114, 170-173
and changes in inequality of income, 39-40, 224 changes over time in, 40-54 characteristics of studies, 41-43, 50-53, 55, 59-61, 73-75 country differences in, 40-43, 54-59
as evidence on permanent income hypothesis, 38-114 farm and nonfarm, 59-69, 165-166 occupational group and, 69-81, 227-228 race differences in, 79-85, 166 and the relative income hypothesis, 162-163, 165-167, 168, 170-182
- Cagan, Philip, 143, 145, 149n, 150f.
Cochrane, Willard W., 100n, 102n, 170n
Changes in income, and consumption-income ratios, 100-114, 170-173
Consumption function (see Budget data on consumption-income ratios, Consumption-income ratios, Income elasticity of consumption, Marginal propensity to consume, and Permanent income hypothesis) Consumption-income ratios (see also Budget data on ——):
cyclical factors in, 118-119, 152
historical stability of, 3-4, 119-124
and interest rates, 8-14, 17, 78, 120 related to current and past income, 4-5, 137-152 relation between individual and aggregate, 18-19, 115
- and size of family, 121-123
and social insurance and assistance, 123 theoretical analysis, 3-17 and wealth-income ratios, 5, 16-17, 28, 86-87, 120, 170, 237-238
- Cornfield, Jerome, 205n
Cyclical stage and consumption-income ratios, 118-119, 152

- Pechman, Joseph A., 49n
 Pennock, Jean L., 100n Permanent income hypothesis (see also Consumption-income ratios and Permanent and transitory components of income):
 budget study evidence on, 38-114
 definition, 6, 20-31, 220-224
 and the distribution of wealth, 210-214
 and individual categories of consumption, 206-209, 216-217 implications for relation of measured consumption to measured income, 31-37, 85-90, 222-223
 time series evidence on, 115-156
- Permanent and transitory components of consumption, relative importance of,
 201-206, 217-218, 232
- Permanent and transitory components of
 income:
 assumed relationship between, 26-27
 estimates of relative importance, from consumption-income data, 51-53, 54, 56-59, 65-69, 71-72, 74-80, 84,
 91-93, 106-108, 125-129, 163, 165-
 167, 171-173, 190-195
 estimates of relative importance, from income data, 187-195
 and income distribution, 209-210
 measurement of relative importance, 125-131, 137-152, 183-186, 218-219, 232
 relative importance of, and consumption-income ratios, 32-37
