Volume Editor's Acknowledgments

I would like to express my thanks to a number of persons who helped the conference run smoothly. Maureen Kaye and Janet Wasserstein of the National Bureau of Economic Research made many of the physical arrangements and managed much of the correspondence. My special appreciation goes to Eugene Smolensky, Director of the Institute for Research on Poverty, for his support at critical points in both the planning stage and the operation of the meeting. Beverly Neuport of the Institute helped solve the inevitable problems that arise in the course of a “long distance” conference. Jill Bury of the Congressional Budget Office—with which I was affiliated while working on the conference—helped with much of the correspondence.
